ABOUT ME

I am a junior web developer who has found her passion for technology and coding after a seven year career within creative industry. I started my journey to tech by committing to the extensive full stack development training with 'Code Institute' and progressed by working on personal projects, getting involved in coding communities/workshops and dedicating all of my time to learning and self-development. Driven by passion and interest in the field I have landed my first dev job within less than a year and I am excited about new opportunities and further progression on this newly found career path.
